The most important thing our country can do to improve health care for women and our families is make health insurance more affordable. That's why I'm glad to see from a recent article in your paper [[Cite headline and date from a recent article on health reform]] that Congress is moving forward on health reform this year.

There will be subsidies to help moderate people buy insurance and the limits on what we can be charged for out-of-pocket costs like co-pays and deductibles. These protections are very important, especially when the recession is straining our household pocketbooks.
